

JANET BENSON

ALUMNA - MSc DIGITAL EDUCATION

Janet is currently working at a research centre based at Trinity College, Dublin which is focused on learning technology and the future of work. She previously had a learning role in a healthcare company and applied for the MSc Digital Education to gain the knowledge and theory behind the practical elements of designing and developing learning material.

“I don't think I'm over-egging it by saying that [the programme] changed my life. [...] The MSc opened so many doors for me. [...] This course will be the best decision you've ever made. [...] You will learn from the absolute best.”

“[On the programme,] I designed [two] set[s] of games [... and] a treasure hunt.”

“[It's] possible to build 'real' friendships in an online space. [...] I've been to both Greece and Scotland to meet friends that I met on the MSc. [...] I think it's a testament to the quality of the course, our interactions and communications that facilitated us forging real and long-lasting relationships with both our classmates and tutors.”
